It is well known that Christ consistently used the expression "follower." He never asks for admirers... or adherents. No, he calls disciples. It is not adherents of a teaching but followers of a life Christ is looking for... Christ claimed to be the way and the truth and the life. For this reason, he could never be satisfied with adherents who accepted his teaching- especially with those who in their lives ignored it or let things take their usual course. His whole life on earth, from beginning to end, was destined solely to have followers and to make admirers impossible.

Christ came into the world with the purpose of saving, not instructing it. At the same time- as is implied in his saving work- he came to be the pattern, to leave footprints for the person who would join him, who would become a follower. -Soren Kierkegaard,
